

Investment Review

The Hereford/DSM Large Cap Fund NAV appreciated 4.9% for the month of October compared to a 4.8% appreciation for the Russell 1000 Growth index and a 3.8% appreciation for the S&P 500. At the end of October, the Fund was invested primarily in the technology, health care, consumer discretionary, and business services sectors, with smaller weights in the energy and materials sectors.

During the month, the Fund slightly exceeded its benchmark on a gross-of-expense basis. This was primarily the result of positive stock selection in the technology and financial sectors. Stock selection in the consumer staples and materials sectors detracted from performance. In October, the best performing positions in the portfolio were Google, Celgene, Schlumberger, F5 Networks and Apple. Intuitive Surgical, Target, 3M Company, Pepsico and Colgate Palmolive were the worst performers. During the month, the Fund exited its positions in Colgate Palmolive and Gen-Probe, and initiated positions in Danone, Juniper Networks, Omnicom Group and Tencent Holdings. Gen-Probe was sold on concerns over weaker testing volumes. With Colgate Palmolive facing stronger competition from Procter & Gamble, the shares were sold and replaced with Danone, the global food processing company. Danone offers similar emerging market exposure but on stronger company fundamentals. Juniper Networks develops products and services that provide network infrastructure solutions for Internet service providers. Omnicom, the advertising and marketing agency, provides global exposure to accelerating advertising trends. Tencent has the leading instant messaging platform in China, runs China's most popular social network web site, and is the country's largest online game operator. The company is poised to be a key beneficiary of increasing Internet penetration and income growth in China.

Slow US economic growth has created substantial political pressure on the US Federal Reserve to take action to accelerate growth. This is a particularly difficult task for the Federal Reserve. Essentially they are being asked to repair, with monetary policy, the anti-growth fiscal policies of the President and Congress. In our view, fiscal policy, meaning taxes, regulations and tort reform, must change in order to accelerate economic growth. Perhaps QE2 can make a modest difference to economic growth, but we doubt it will be much, and there are longer-term inflation risks associated with such a policy as well. Already, one of the consequences of QE2 has been a weaker dollar, which may well enhance American exports, but may also result in more expensive imports such as oil.

There are clearly quite a number of moving pieces in the economic outlook, not all of which are bright. On the other hand, we believe the election will serve as a positive catalyst, and an extension of the Bush tax cuts will be positive as well. With or without QE2, a slow growth global outlook seems the likely outcome. With a bit more confidence in slow growth, investors may well begin to sell bonds to buy stocks, and in fact the Federal Reserve appears to be positioning itself to facilitate that very outcome.

Investment Objective

The investment objective of the LCG sub fund is to provide capital appreciation principally through investments in US-based growing corporations with market capitalizations generally above 2 billion dollars. These companies are chosen for their growth prospects, attractive returns, solid business fundamentals and intelligent management. The sub fund may, on an ancillary basis, invest in US-based companies with lower market capitalizations as well as in non-US based companies. The Compartment may invest in American Depository Receipts and American Depository Shares. The reference benchmark for this strategy is the Russell 1000 Growth Index.
